

About Karen Wenborn

November 2007

Karen has spent many years working with major blue-chip companies around the UK, delivering world-class sales, marketing and customer service programmes.

An acknowledged industry expert in CRM, she has piloted many companies through major change programmes, and has designed, built and implemented award winning contact centres for some multi-national household names.

Previously working mainly within the financial services sector, Karen determined that one day she would be able to spend more time on her great passion – books.

Classical Comics has fulfilled that ambition and more.

As a parent she recognises the need to provide today's Playstation generation with literature in a format that will engage and delight.

Already the proud owner of well over 2,000 books, (all of which have been read!), there is little that Karen doesn't know about literature from all periods, and so it is with great pleasure that she is spearheading a major force in world publishing, in the form of Classical Comics
